Wish I had this book several years ago. I had already learned many of the lessons in the book the hard way. If you have an elderly parent, read this book before your parents need your help

A must read!

I have found this book helpful as I have started out as a patient advocate. It is easy to understand with terminology that can be comprehended without the need for a medical terminology book. Although one is needed, I am looking to purchase another by this author.

I recognized nearly every question in this book because I asked them over 18 months of caring for a cancer patient. Unfortunately, I didn’t discover it until I no longer needed it. It would have helped if I had found it in time.

This is the book I needed when my mother was ill! It covers many topics related to hospital and home care, but does so in a way that you won't feel overwhelmed. The arrangement of the book into questions and the various ways provided to quickly look up topics and questions makes it a handy reference for advocates trying to handle so many things at once while caring for a loved one.

The strength of this book is quickly orienting readers with medical issues, so they can get past the deluge of new information that comes with hospital stays and home care. The chapter on insurance and Medicare was very helpful. Medicare and insurance bills are confusing and the explanations helped me sort it out and feel more in control.

I was looking for a book to help me with my Dad's hospital stay and, after taking him home, for issues with homecare. This book does both very well! More importantly you can see that the author actually went through a great deal of the information presented. This is first hand knowledge and much more than just research!

Here is a book that does a great straight forward job explaining home healthcare equipment as well as many other areas of consideration that advocates need to be aware of when deciding what to do when someone they love comes home from the hospital. This is the kind of book that lets you hit the ground running.
