Synopsis

Everything has a place. Things last longer when we take care of them. Respect, responsibility, and stewardship are concepts that even young children can relate to because they have things they value. This book encourages children to pick up after themselves, put things back where they belong, and ask permission to use things that don't belong to them. It also teaches simple environmental awareness: respecting and taking care of the earth. Includes ideas for adult-led activities and discussions.

These books are really nice social stories for any child. I have bought a number of them so far for my autistic 7 year old and he really enjoys them and I think they are helpful.

This is a good book for explaining how we should all behave----even grownups.

This is an excellent book series if you're looking for something to work on peer skills and personal development skills with your child from toddlers years through early elementary.

My son loves these and we have used them for more than just reading. He loves to relate them to real life situations. Very helpful!

I have this book for my grand daughter. Very good reading, learning and reminder for young children to learn "respect others and take care of things" as the title is.

My kids enjoyed it.

Short. Not especially to the point . It did not "get" or hold the children's attention. Too bad, an important topic.

Wonderful series. I highly recommend these books to kids on the spectrum and any children who are having trouble with the individual concepts. This book is great for teaching the concept of responsibility. I recommend all of these books, the whole series is wonderful.
