A graduate of Cambridge University, Ali Lakhani is a practicing trial lawyer and is the founder of the traditionalist journal, Sacred Web. He lives in Vancouver, British Columbia.

One of the best books I have read. The insights and analyses are as acute and precise as they can be without being narrow or ideological. It is a joy to read it again and again for its elegant phrases and expression.

The collection of essays within this Perennial Wisdom release are worth considering to grapple with the esoteric and rational side of Islam's approach to Justice.

I started this book, but having hard time to connect it. This books may have lot of information but it is written in a way which make harder for reader to continue in reading. I will update my post again later once I finished this book.

Cool

The Sacred Foundations of Justice in Islam: The Teachings of Ali ibn Abi Talib is an anthology of scholarly essays by learned authors (including two by prize-winning scholar Seyyed Hossein Nasr) discussing the teachings of the first Shia Imam (the fourth Caliph of Sunni Islam, and one of the forefathers of Sufism) that contemplate those foundations of human governance that transcend the mundane realities of life. Issues discussed include the metaphysical questions "What is meant by Justice?", "What does it mean to be Just?" and "How is Justice related to Truth and the very structure of Reality?" The next best thing to studying Ali's writings in their original language, The Sacred Foundations of Justice in Islam is a welcome addition to philosophical discussion shelves as well as Sufi studies shelves.
