One of the first assignments Ben Box took as a freelance writer in 1980 was sub-editing work on the South American Handbook. The plan then was to write about contemporary Iberian and Latin American affairs, but in no time at all the lands south of the Rio Grande took over, inspiring journeys to all corners of the sub-continent. Ben has contributed to newspapers, magazines and learned tomes, usually on the subject of travel, and became editor of the South American Handbook in 1989. He has also been involved in Footprint's Central America & Mexico, Caribbean Islands, Brazil and Peru since their inception. In 2001 he wrote Footprint's Cuzco & the Inca heartland Handbook, on which he has collaborated for recent editions with Steve Frankham. Having a doctorate in Spanish and Portuguese studies from London University, Ben maintains a strong interest in Latin American literature and as a cricketer he looks forward to the day his village side is invited to play anywhere in South America where there is a pitch.

Robert & Daisy Kunstaetter - Born and raised in Ecuador (Quito and Riobamba), Daisy Isacovici's pet peeve is being mistaken for a gringa. Robert Kunstaetter hails from Montreal, where Daisy attended university. Soon after they met in 1979, he suggested travelling in South America for a year or so, and they have yet to turn back. Over the years and miles, Robert and Daisy became regular correspondents for Footprint, contributing to the South American Handbook and other Latin American titles. Based back in Ecuador since 1993, they are authors of Footprint's Ecuador & Galapagos and Trekking in Ecuador. They also travel frequently to Peru and Bolivia. After all these years, Robert and Daisy still have difficulty distinguishing between work and play.

Peru and Ecuador are firmly on the tourist trail, but you also get a good, comprehensive guide to Bolivia with this guide. Culturally, these countries closely overlap, so it makes sense to include them in one guide. The text is good, as Footprint guides are especially well known for including rich cultural and historical content. The listings are also quite dense, and offer a wealth of options for off-the-beaten-track places that might not otherwise make your itinerary. I've used this guide to plan trips to Potosi and Sucre in Bolivia, cities which are thinly covered in other guides, if they're covered at all. Lead author Ben Box knows this part of the world like a native, so now you can too. The book is physically small and well constructed, and will take some abuse. Just don't get it wet. The card-stock cover and thin pages don't work well in the rain. Keep in mind that this material is generally the same as the content included in Footprint's huge South America Handbook, so if you have that book, you don't need to buy this one.

Great

I was disappointed in the binding and paper. Funny, at least two types of paper is used, some shiny and flimsy, some matte and thicker. I guess I'll stick with Lonely Planet Guides. Nowhere is there info on the edition, publication date, although there are references to 2010, so I think its pretty current. Lots of ads, but they could be helpful, I guess when in country.
